CONTINUING MEDICAL EDUCATION

Description

Taumatic brain injury (TBI) is now being recognized as a public health problem. TBI is an especially important issue when considering children, as the highest rate of reported injuries occurs across the pediatric age group. Furthermore, TBI is known to be the leading cause of acquired disability during childhood. Nevertheless, there is little evidence base for how to best evaluate and manage brain injury in children. This conference will directly focus on pediatric research and clinical models and will dedicate half of the talks to clinical research topics which will include discussion of functional outcomes after early childhood injury, measures of neuroplasticity, and new assessment, treatment, and educational/policy tools which can be used for clinical and rehabilitation management of children with TBI.

Who Should Attend

This activity is intended for health care professionals and researchers working in pediatric emergency medicine, trauma surgery, critical care medicine, neurology, neurosurgery, psychiatry, psychology, physical medicine and rehabilitation, sports medicine, and education.

Objectives

After attending this activity, the participant will demonstrate the ability to:

- Discuss newer evaluation tools being studied for diagnosis of TBI and evaluation of recovery from injury in children.
- Describe the range of long-term functional outcomes in children with abusive head trauma.
- Identify promising translational therapies that may provide neuroprotection for children after severe TBI.
- Identify the mechanisms and treatments involved in long-term plasticity and recovery following brain injury in children.

ACCREDITATION STATEMENT

This activity has been planned and implemented in accordance with the accreditation requirements and policies of the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME) through the joint providership of Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine and the Kennedy Krieger Institute. The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine is accredited by the ACCME to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

CREDIT DESIGNATION STATEMENT

The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine designates this live activity for a maximum of 8.75 AMA PRA Category 1 Credits. Physicians should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

Acknowledgement

Applications for commercial support from health care related industries are pending. A complete list of contributors will be provided in the syllabus. Please note that commercial support received is solely for the educational component of the activity and will not be used to provide food and beverage.

Please note: The Physician Payments Sunshine Act was enacted by Congress to increase public awareness of financial relationships between drug and medical device manufacturers and physicians. In compliance with the requirements of this Act, the commercial supporter/s of this activity may require the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine to report certain professional information (such as name, address, National Provider Identifier (NPI), and State License number) of physician attendees who receive complimentary food and beverage in conjunction with a CME activity. The commercial supporter is required to submit the collected data to the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services which will then publish the data on its website.
